On April 14, Saint Care HD, which provides the Industrial Innovation Organization and visiting nursing care services , announced that it will establish a new company, Care Design Institute (CDI), to provide a care plan for promoting self-reliance and prevention of severity by AI through a joint investment .

In addition to the above two companies in the current investment, Nikki , of long-term care services Tsukui , social welfare corporation of this Hoenn , participation and long-term care service providers. The total investment is 1.5 billion yen.

In Japan where the declining birthrate and the aging of the population are progressing, social security expenses are increasing and manpower shortage in nursing care sites is a social problem. Under such circumstances, CDI will develop a care plan that matches the condition and symptoms of the care recipient, and will develop a care management system that leads to self-reliance support and prevention of severity. Artificial intelligence is used for this system, AI learns care plan of the care recipient who received nursing care service in the past, it says until generation of care plan.

Originally, this business had been doing empirical research in collaboration with local governments of Saint Care HD. And, it was CDI that was spun off for the purpose of implementing social implementation of this project. The company also announced a business tie-up with Silicon Valley's Activity Recognition Inc., and is planning to carry out survey research using AI care plans in collaboration with local governments and others.

Mizuho survey of Corporate Bank , according to Japan's elderly population (65 years or older) is at the peak of 2025 reached 30% of the total population, consumption market for the elderly is that it expanded to 101.3 trillion yen. It is about 61% more than the 62.9 trillion yen in 2007. Among them, the nursing care industry is expected to have a market size of 12.5 trillion yen.

In this way, the consumer market for the elderly has a huge scale, and also focuses on countries and municipalities that face issues of increasing the burden of social security expenses. Not only to long-term care, the other day was also introduced in TechCrunch Japan "Magochan'neru" I like, likely senior first start-up that captures the elderly in the center of the business has increased in the future.
